Rockefeler's Views

What course did Mr Rockefeller pursue in connection with this upheaval of employer? His duty was clear, for he is on record with the admission. I think it is the duty of every director to ascertain the conditions as far as he can and if there are abuses, to right them. Putting the injustice to one side, the fact remains that we claimed many abuses and cited them specifically

"The statute law of Colorado ordered a semimonthly payday, check weighmen so that we might not be cheated the right to form unions the eighthour day and payment in cash not We charged that the Colorado record that a mercenary militia paid Fuel & Iron company had violated there and other laws and in addition, we told of evil housing conditions high rents company store extertions saloon environments, armed guards and the denial of freedom in speech education religion and politics. ### MARRIED WOMEN AS TEACHERS

THE effort now being made in the Colorado legislature to har married women from teaching in the schools of the state should be defeated. The question involves the liberties of the sex. A law to prohibit women with families from employment as teachers would work great hardships in many instances, as they are forced often to assist in supporting their families.

This is especially true in this country where husbands are sometimes unable to work because of ill health. If school authorities find that they can get better results from employing unmarried women as teachers they should have the right to do so, but on the other hand, they should' not be barred from hiring married women if they regard them as equally competent.

But aside from this possible infringement of individual liberty there is every reason to believe that married women are as competent to teach as their unmarried sisters. The unmarried woman all too often makes teaching merely a stepping stone to Anatrimony. If married women are distracted by the cares of their homes, it is equally true that unmarried women are absorbed oftentimes in the still more distracting social whirl. If either group has an advantage over the other it would seem to lie with the married ones, as having more practical experience in the handling of the

APPENDICITICAND A SCANDAL

A FORTUNATE attack of appendicitis suffered by the woman in the case in French scandal involving Francois Des Claux, paymaster of the army, has broughtthe investigation to a sudden halt. Des Claux is charged with sending food supplies to the unknown woman, who is reputed to be wealthy and to move in the best society, from the triple rations allowed him as a perquisite of his office. The offense would seem to be a trivial one. It was trumped up, possibly, by political enemies of the officer, but the sudden illness of the woman is so characteristic of the sudden appearance of this disease that the question often arises as to why it has become so common.

The medical and lay press has had considerable to say about the matter in recent months. There seems to be a general agreement that overeating, combined with the lack of proper exercise and the excessive use of rich foods cause the mischief, although there is a wide difference of opinion as to the relative harmfulness of various items on the ordinary bill of fare. The vegetarians, of course, lay all the blame to meat eating, while the opposite school insists that the unrestricted use of carbohydrates, the sugars and statches, cause fermentation that sets up unpleasant symptoms and ultimate inflammation of the

The average person pays little attention to theories. But the least observing have noticed that the hardy, hoary-handed sons and this who thee on coarse foods and who have some trouble to get enough of them. are little bothered with the malady. On the other hand, they see persons of wealth and leisure fall easy prev. The method of living, therefore, would seem to have something to do with the matter. Want of exercise, abundance of rich foods, with meat forming a regular article of diet, tell the story of appendicitis.

Perhaps, after all, Des Claux was not acting the part of the true friend when he provided so bountifully for the woman in

ONE REASON FOR INSANITY

AMERICANS are work to say that the strainers life of the age is driving men and women last tr. Statistics are given to e that the nullber of such cases is on And again and thoughtminimum containe the profession have find sould way to check the id of the distase. Late govthe show that the number of on me morened faster than altha ghalliris

This has 1-1 national authorities to seek the reason. It has been found that cases classified as alcoholic, or those which naturally result from direpation of this character, représent about twenty-five per cent of the total for males against about sight per cent for females. By climinating these persons from the total number of insane it is found that the excess of insecity among men is no greater than would naturally follow from the fact that there-are more men in the country than women. Thus, one of the great causes of insanity is shown to be the use of alcoholic drinks.

Continuing the study it will be seen that other forms of dissipation are contributing causes. Improper food, late hours, excesses in amusement and bad habits of living in general are the things that shorten life, or bring on a living death through mental troubles. The strenuous life of a wellpoised person, with good habits, never harmed anyone. It is the excess that kills the man or clouds his reason.

A STRANGE CONCEPTION OF SPORT

OF ALL the senseless contests of the age the six-day bicycle race takes all medals and prizes. Many European countries have not held such events for years, but in the United States the sport, as it is inappropriately called, continues to attract wide attention, and fresh recruits join the grind whenever older members fall worn out by the wayside.

Fourteen teams, representing nine nations, began such a contest at Chicago Thursday evening. All of the twenty-eight riders participating were in the pink of condition at the start, but reports since show that several have already been obliged to give up the contest for one reason or another, and, if the results of similar contests elsewhere are a fair forecast, many more riders will end the test seriously injured or at least physical wrecks.

Mere feats of endurance of this character do not come within the range of true sport, notwithstanding Mr. Dooley's definition that sport is work that we don't have to do. Sane athletics combine pleasure with sound bodily development. Contests that drive participants almost to insanity and use up reserves stores of energy are relics of harbarism.

TECHNICALITIES THAT AID From the Chicy so Herald.

A dispatch from Washington says that the habeas corpus apply of the Frank, convicted of the murder of Mary Phagan at Atlanta, Ga, was docketed case will probably not be reached for 18 months: Frank's case is now on appeal on a very technical point-whether the failure of the defendant to he present in court when the verdict was rendered deprived him of a constitutional right to a fair trial. The appeal was granted-let it be noted-not on the merits of the case at all, but on what people generally refer to as a "mere technicality."

So far as appears on the record Frank owes his stay of execution to this mere technicality. He wes the privilege of setting the highest court of he land to review his case to this mere technicality. If it had not been that the courts heeded and acted in this mere technicality he might have been a dead man now. Aff this calls attention to the fact that what the ayman speaks of contemptuously as a mere technicality is as often an instrument of justice as of injustice. What seems at first sight a mere technicalty may prove, when we get to the bottom of its neaning and effect, to be an essential safesplard of iuman rights and the orderly processes of the law-

There is no question that legal procedure is in need of reform. We have the word of eminent lawers for that. And no doubt reform will come in due time. But any reform that aftempts to do away with what the layman generally regards as mere technicalities would deal justice a blow from which it would hardly recover.

MR. BRYAN'S REAL SERVICE

From the New York Times, Secretary Bryan's rooms are constantly crowded ith visitors; he sees them in streams; he is one of the busiest of cabinet officers; he works indefatigably, incessantly, often far into the night. How comes it that such an industrious official has Illatoriness, and wherein thee his industry consist? explain the history of the Wilson administration.

Mr. Bryan is so far from being a great secretary of state that he is not even a good one. He has no mastery of the details of his office. Much that goes on in it he does not even know. ### OUR EXPORTATION OF ARMS nan-American argument that our neutrality is unreal unless we forbid the export of arms. Germany having lost com wid of the sea, American raffic in war supplies helps the ailies. If the position were reversed, our neutrality would still be empurged but not by the Gy men-Americans, and we should be written down as the partner of Teutonic militarism.

From the New Republic There is a cetchy sagonableness about the Ger-

Partigans saide, there is we believe, a growing body of pacifist opinion, represented by men of the ability and character of Dr. Edward Devine, which insists that American manufacturers are "capitalizing carnage," making profits out of murder, and that in decency and in humanity this nation ought to have nothing to do with the European crime. But what would be the consequences of so pure a stand? It would "stop the war," we are told, but where?" With Germany in possession of Belgium and the richest part of France.

be that militarism pays, that God is on the side of the big ready battalions that a nation which dreams. plans and organizes war can impose its will on the less military nations. Such an embargo would be regarded by the allies as the most desperate treachery, as an arbitrary reversal of all international law, not in time of peace but in the midst of g

We should by the embargo which Mr. Barthold? and others propose neutralize at one stroke a large part of British naval superiority; we should be dong az much for Germany as if we established a fairly good blockade in the Atlantic. And if ever we ourselves faced a tile and death struggle we should have established a Nacedent which might prove fatal. The proposal is a piece of thoughtless morality, a bit of good intention with unconsidered consequences. As a method of warring against war it belongs with incantations, spells, and the sacrificing of goats.
